INDECISION

THE complicated Laos situation is bedevilled by a larger complication, in that the Western powers can find no agreement among themselves.

Stated tersely the position in as follows. In Laos itself, there are three warring factions, represented by the rightwing royalist group; the so-called neutralist group under Prince Souvanna Phouma; and the leftist group who follow Pathet Lao.

The situation is further complicated by the fact that the rightwing group under Prince Boun Oum, while finding some favour in Western eyes, and not a little support, happens to be the section in power in Laos at the moment, and feels better able to solve its own problems.

Meanwhile, the neutralists under Prince Souvanna Phouma, find favour in Russian eyes, and are supported by the USSR.

On the other hand, the eastern branch of communism represented by China supports the leftist Pathet Lao, and America wanted to keep this group out of the conference.

FORTUNATELY the Americans have changed their minds and taken a more realistic attitude.

But it is quite true to say there has never been such an unholy mess in political affairs since the Holy Alliance which the famed Duke of Wellington described as a mixture of mysticism and nonsense.

For while there is not much mysticism about the Laos situation at the moment, there is a great deal of nonsense.

If China is not allowed to speak on behalf of her protégé, Pathet Lao, then China will find other ways and means of letting her voice be heard.

And should this situation prove to be the prelude to another Korean, with its attending disasters to East and West alike, it will finally have to be settled in the manner the saner voices of East and West call for at the moment; namely, around the conference table.

If argument and compromise can be substituted for potential strife made the more terrible by the latent instruments of portentous science, then surely reason should prevail, pride should be swallowed, facts substituted for fancies, and the conference should proceed, and every voice should be heard.

The rightwing government of Prince Boun Oum has proved that it is unable to settle affairs on its own. Meanwhile the leftwing sections have proved that if their voices are not to be heard, then the voices of their not so silent partners will speak on their behalf.

There remains then but one thing to do. Honour is not lost by compromise, nor is the ultimate situation lost by listening to opposing voices.

Reason dictates that the delegates of all the opposing factions should get round that conference table with a minimum loss of time.

Troops take over Seoul in blaze of gunfire SOUTH KOREA MARTIAL LAW

John Chang—Deposed?

WHERE IS JOHN CHANG?

Seoul, May 16. The whereabouts of Premier John M. Chang were not definitely known this morning.

Most informants said Chang and his wife were reported in his suite in the Bando Hotel in Seoul. The Bando was under heavy guard by soldiers. The telephone operator in the hotel said his room did not answer and she did not know if he was there. A hotel clerk claimed he saw Chang leave the hotel about 5 am. That was about the time the revolutionary committee was announcing over Seoul Radio that it had carried out the coup.

A bodyguard at Chang's residence said he did not know where the Premier was or where he had stayed overnight.

A general army officer claimed Chang was under arrest but there was no confirmation.—AP.

A spokesman for the Korean Consulate-General said today that all they knew about the revolution was through the news agencies and they had no comment to make.

The Consulate also refused to give photos of the deposed Premier, Mr. John Chang, and Lt. General Chang Do Young, leader of the revolutionary junta, to the China Mail.

SEARCH

London, May 15. Bertram F. Wright admitted in court today that he had borrowed a city bus. He said he needed it to search for his runaway wife. He was fined £50. The wife?—Still missing.—UPI.

Coup d'etat by pro-Western military junta

Seoul, May 16.

The Seoul Radio announced today that martial law had been declared throughout South Korea. The announcement came shortly after a revolutionary military committee claimed it had taken over the government.

The broadcast said martial law was declared by the Chairman of the revolutionary committee, Lieutenant General Chang Do Young, at 9 am (0030 GMT).

Armed troops moved into Seoul in a blaze of gunfire before daybreak, and the committee announced over the radio a short time later that it had seized control in a swift, apparently bloodless coup.

The military committee announced over the Seoul Radio that its aims were strongly anti-Communist and strongly pro-Western.

The first announcement of the action by the military revolutionary committee came after 40 minutes of heavy shooting in Seoul.

Who the troops were firing on was not immediately known and there were no reports of casualties. After that heavy firing, only an occasional shot could be heard in the city until the second outbreak of shooting shortly after 7 am.

Lone shot

That quickly died down and again only an occasional lone shot was heard.

All reports from the streets said only units of the army and marine corps were involved. How strong they are could not immediately be learned, but at least several battalions seemed to be involved. Troops seized major government buildings and took over the direction of traffic. Trucks filled with singing marines roared through the streets.

The revolutionary committee declared its action was a complete success and there was no immediate indication of any counter action.

Both the UN Command and the US Embassy here declined to comment. The armed forces radio told US soldiers and civilians to remain in their compounds or homes.

Field officers and troops at present appeared to be maintaining neutral and some informants felt the success of the coup might hinge on any move by the field army.

The Seoul Radio reported that the revolutionary committee also had taken over such major cities as Pusan and Taegu. Officers issuing orders and seen around buildings and in-stations in Seoul were of company grade. Lt. Gen Chang Do Young, 38, had not spoken on the radio himself.

The young general became Army Chief of Staff earlier this year in the second shake-up of top army posts since the revolution that toppled the Rhee regime in April 1960.

In control

The revolutionary committee established its headquarters in the offices of the Korean Athletic Association across from the city hall in Seoul.

Armed soldiers took over all major police stations in Seoul and soldiers were in control of traffic.

Worried citizens thronged the streets in their night clothes in an effort to get word on the developments.

Radio broadcasts told residents to go to work as usual "without fear." People were told to "be at ease and have no fears." The radio also announced the use of private cars would be banned for the present, but private vehicles continued to operate on the city's streets.

Informants at revolutionary committee headquarters said a young marine brigadier general was a top leader in the coup. They identified him as Kim Yoon-kun.

They said the main force of the troops was the Third Marine Brigade and that the marines marched into Seoul from Kimp'o, about 20 miles northwest of the capital.

They said the marines were joined by two army reserve divisions and identified the units as the 30th and 33rd.

One Korean news agency quoted what it said was a statement by Marine General Kim. It said: "Coup d'etat are not good things, but we had to do it now before we lost our freedom. We acted and we succeeded."—AP.

SCRAMBLE FOR SURVIVAL

Privy Council dismisses HK appeal

London, May 15.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council today upheld a judgment of the Hongkong Supreme Court that a rebuilding certificate issued by the Hongkong Director of Public Works in October 1957, was invalid.

The certificate was granted to Mr. Kwong Siu-lau, in respect of Nos. 230, 232, 234 and 236 Temple-street, Kowloon, in which he had held a Crown lease until 1951.

The Privy Council upheld the Hongkong judgment in favour of the tenants and sub-tenants of the property and dismissed with costs an appeal by the Director and Mr. Kwong. Giving judgment today, Lord Morris said that when Mr. Kwong's Crown lease expired in December, 1951, a new lease was contemplated under which he was to develop the site by erecting new buildings. In October, 1957, the Director gave Mr. Kwong a rebuilding certificate under provisions of the Landlord and Tenant Ordinance which had been repealed however the previous April.

The repeal rendered preliminary procedural steps abortive and resulted in the lease, Mr. Kwong, having no accrued right to vacant possession surviving the repeal, Lord Morris said.—Reuter.

PRELUDE TO MEETING WITH MR K?

Washington, May 15.

President Kennedy agreed late today to meet Soviet Ambassador Mr. Mikhail A. Menshikov tomorrow. The session could throw some light on a possible meeting next month between Mr. Kennedy and Soviet Premier Mr. Nikita S. Khrushchev.

The 10 am conference with Mr. Menshikov was announced by the White House without comment shortly after the President and Mrs. Kennedy returned to the capital by plane from a long weekend in Florida.

A MESSAGE

It was learned, however that Mr. Menshikov said he would like to meet Mr. Kennedy before the President and Mrs. Kennedy leave tomorrow for Ottawa and a two-day ceremonial visit as the guests of the Canadian government.

The Russian envoy, who will be accompanied to the White House by Acting Secretary of State Mr. Chester Bowles, was understood to have some message for Mr. Kennedy from the Soviet Premier.

The expected message could be, in essence, an inquiry from Mr. Khrushchev about a possible meeting with the American President during Mr. Kennedy's visit to Europe at the end of this month.—UPI.

'Violating Vows' EX-EOKA FIGHTERS FLAY MAKARIOS

Nicosia, May 15. A splinter group of former EOKA men today accused Archbishop Makarios, "Our cackled idol of yesterday," of "shattering dreams of freedom" and "violating all his vows."

The Cyprian Fighters' Association, a group critical of the Zurich agreement which saved the way for Cyprus independence, today circulated leaflets replying to a recent speech by the Archbishop in which he referred to "elements which aim at destroying everything we build."

The leaflets said: "We shall maintain and preserve the courage of a fighter and the virtues of a Greek... but not for him. Not for his edifice."

The leaflets criticised "daily receptions and parties where former colonialists and our leaders of yesterday embrace each other."

They also referred to photographs of Archbishop Makarios seated in British jeeps "going round with British generals with a repulsive grin on his face" and "touring the land of our fathers which is today planted with nuclear charges."—Reuter.

NOW, IT'S 'INSTANT WATER'

New York, May 15.

Grocer James Crimmins set up a fancy display and put "Instant Water" on sale.

Store advertisements called it the "best possible way to make coffee," particularly instant coffee, and "fine for outdoor cooking."

Five persons bought the water on Saturday, at 85 cents a quart can. And on Monday Crimmins reported these comments:

One man said: "Everybody in my family thinks I'm nuts now, so I might as well prove it."

A woman took the water home, and then telephoned Crimmins: "What kind of coffee do you mix it with?"

Is it any good for martinis? Another asked. Crimmins said he would refund the money.

"If you're going to have a good time in this business you have to make the laughs yourself," Crimmins said.—AP.

BARE-FOOTED ESCAPE

Manchester, May 16.

A woman prisoner broke away from a jail escort on Monday outside the city courthouse, kicked off her shoes and vanished into running crowds—running hard in bare feet.

Police gave up the chase after two blocks and issued the description of Sylvia Clowes, 20, a married woman. Sylvia escaped as guards took her to prison after being found guilty on larceny charges.—AP.

Australian in Canada FIRED BECAUSE OF ESKIMO GIRL

Melbourne, May 15.

A young Australian has been fired from his US$8,000-a-year job in the Canadian Arctic, because of his friendship with an Eskimo girl, according to the Melbourne Herald's Toronto correspondent.

The Australian is Terry Whitfield, 26, of Sydney. The correspondent, Michael Cope, stated:

He said Whitfield came to Ottawa last week with his Eskimo girl, Ann Wainluk, an attractive 25-year-old trained nurse and former air stewardess.

"I'm going to take this up with the Prime Minister, Mr. Diefenbaker," he said.

A Member of Parliament has already promised to tackle the government in the House. The correspondent said Whitfield was working as a diesel and refrigeration mechanic on a mid-Canada radar warning line station at Great Whale, on the east coast of Hudson Bay. "My contract with the Canadian Marconi Co. up there forbids fraternisation with Eskimos," he said. "But all Ann and I did was to eat together in a restaurant and go seal and fox-hunting in temperatures 30 degrees below zero."

WARNED

Whitfield said he was warned several times in the Arctic that he had to stop seeing the Eskimo girl. "In desperation I told them to get off my back, otherwise I would take the matter up with the newspapers," he said.

"Then I got a letter from the director of the government northern administration branch in Ottawa, Mr. B. G. Silvert, asking me to go to the press."

The correspondent quoted Mr. Whitfield as saying that he is going to fight his dismissal on the grounds that it contravenes Canada's Bill of Rights which guarantees freedom of assembly and association without discrimination of race, national origin, colour, religion or sex.

His letter of dismissal has been handed over to the Australian High Commissioner's office in Ottawa for safe keeping, the correspondent added.—China Mail Special.

U.S. LEADERS KNOW ABOUT 37 LAUNCHING SITES Location of Soviet missile bases

Washington, May 15.
U. S. military leaders believe they know the locations of 37 Soviet missile-launching pads, including one less than 500 miles from Alaska. And they figure the Russians have 35 to 50 long-range war rockets ready to shoot.

At least 10 of the reported missile pads have been identified as launch sites for the Soviet Union's 8,000-mile-range T3 missile, which carries a thermonuclear warhead.

Further, the United States has determined the location of 14 Russian missile and rocket factories.

All of this information appears in the May issue of Military Review, a magazine published by the U. S. Army Command and General Staff College at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas.

The magazine noted that the data has been compiled from unclassified sources and added, "because of a tight Soviet control over military information, this data is derived from sources which are not necessarily accurate or complete."

In addition to estimating the Russians have between 35 and 50 long range missiles ready to shoot, the military review figures the Soviet Union is capable of producing up to 200 strategic missiles by the winter of 1961-62.

U.S. MISSILES
At latest count, the United States had an estimated 59 ready-to-shoot missiles, including 32 of the submarine-launched Polaris rockets.

Further, said the magazine, "There is some evidence that the USSR is prepared to fire strategic missiles from mobile launchers mounted on rail cars."

The rail-mounted missile is believed to be a boost-glide weapon, known as the T3A. This missile is boosted upward by a rocket engine, then glides to its target like an aircraft. It carries a 3,100 pound payload. The range is not known but since it is regarded as a strategic weapon it presumably can travel 1,500 miles or more.

In spotting the launching pads, the magazine noted that all are located within the Soviet Union, the exception of one at Serev, 20 miles north of Warsaw, Poland.

Most of the Russian launch pads appear to be located west of the Ural mountains, though there is a launch site at Andry in Siberia across the Bering sea from Alaska.

NEAR JAPAN
There is, additionally, a concentration on the Siberian mainland just to the northwest of Japan and on the Sakhalin islands, due north of Japan.

The sites near Japan are identified by the magazine as Komsomolsk and Nikolayev in Siberia and Okha, Terpeniya and Korsakov in the Sakhalin.

There is a heavy concentration of missile launch sites in northern Russia at Kuznessaren, Sovetsk, Luga, Minsk, Kalinin, Brobuisht, Roslavl, Kiev and Kulu.

In general, however, the launch sites appear to be widely dispersed, including three intercontinental-range launch sites along the extreme southern borders—at Murghab, Alima-Ata and Irkutsk.—AP.

Convicted murderer's appeal dismissed

Ottawa, May 15.
The Supreme Court of Canada today dismissed an appeal by convicted murderer Louis William Fisher of Toronto.

Fisher, convicted of the June 10, 1960, knife-slitting of Margaret Bennett of Toronto, has been sentenced to be hanged on June 27.

Fisher based his appeal, which previously had been rejected by the Ontario Appeal Court, on alleged misdirection by trial judge J. Thomson of Toronto. The High Court ruled, in a 9-0 decision, that the judge's actions were "according to law."

Fisher admitted stabbing Miss Bennett 15 times after a drinking bout. His main defence against the capital sentence was that drunkenness made him incapable of intent.—JPL.

'We're friendly with Thailand': Rahman

Kuala Lumpur, May 15.
The Malaysian Prime Minister, Tunku Abdul Rahman, today attacked those who wanted Malaysia to take over the southern province of Thailand "by hook or by crook."

"We cannot do this, we cannot afford to fight with Thailand. We are neighbours and are on friendly terms. We cannot spare our money to buy bullets and firearms to declare war with Thailand," he said in a speech.—Reuters.

U.S. Govt probes American Stock Exchange

Washington, May 15.
The Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) today launched an effort to determine whether the American Stock Exchange fails to give maximum protection to the investing public.

WON'T DRIVE BUS Colour bar trouble in Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., May 15.
A battered team of racial integrationists testing bus station colour barriers in the South was stalled today when bus drivers refused to drive them from Birmingham to Montgomery.

No passengers were allowed to board the bus. A driver told a reporter "We aren't going to drive it. That's final."

D. J. Owens, manager of the Greyhound Bus terminal here, said "Our dispatcher is seeking to solve the difficulty."

A spokesman for the group of integrationists said "It may be necessary for us to wait here until Greyhound decides if service will be restored. We don't know what our next move will be."

UNSAFE

Alabama Public Safety Director Floyd Mann said he had assigned a highway patrol car to escort the bus from Birmingham to Montgomery.

A little later, however, Governor John Patterson cancelled the escort order. The Governor said feelings are so high in Alabama that it is unsafe for the integrationists to remain in the state.

He said he would provide a patrol escort to the nearest state line but "we will not escort them to any other cities in Alabama to continue their rabble-rousing."

The members of the Congress of Racial Equality—eight Negroes and eight white persons—were attacked at Anniston, Alabama, and at Birmingham on the two buses they rode into Alabama from Atlanta on Sunday.

PREVENT VIOLENCE

At the request of U.S. Attorney General Robert Kennedy, following conversations with him by telephone, the core leaders decided to put all their people on one bus, "because it would be easier to protect than two buses," a spokesman said.

At Montgomery, scene of several racial incidents in recent years, Police Commissioner L. B. Sullivan said officers would "take whatever action is necessary" to suppress agitation and prevent violence.

The core group is on a southward swing, aboard regularly scheduled buses that started in Washington, 11 days ago and is scheduled to end in New Orleans on Wednesday.—AP.

LONDON, SOUTHERN ENGLAND PLUNGED INTO DARKNESS Power failure brings black-out

A wide area of London and southern England was plunged into darkness for 20 minutes tonight.

Newspapers, news agencies, the British Broadcasting Corporation sound stations and one independent television station were out of action, and traffic on the main roads piled up in a black-out reminiscent of the last war gripped the area.

A spokesman for the Central Electricity Authority said "the causes of the failure were still being investigated, but four causes, as well as Metropolitan London were affected."

Services nearly 60 miles from London were interfered with.

A Royal Automobile Club spokesman compared the traffic chaos with that during the war. Traffic lights failed. When motorists switched on their headlights, all the light they had, they dazzled each other.

The power break came at 2040 GMT just as the first editions of the London morning

The inquiry promises to be the Federal Government's broadest and deepest of an organized stock exchange since depression days. The result could be new laws or rules affecting all the nation's stock exchanges.

Officials of the American Exchange, the country's second largest, said they welcomed the investigation, although the organization's rules and practices already have been reviewed by the SEC "on a number of occasions."

The investigation stems directly from the case of Gerard A. Re and his son, Gerard F. Re, both expelled from membership of the American Exchange on May 4.

The SEC found the Res had wilfully violated anti-fraud and other provisions of the federal securities laws, causing "millions of dollars of harm to thousands of unsuspecting investors."

IMPROPER

The commission wants for one thing to determine why the Res were able to make improper use of the American Exchange. But the SEC emphasized that it was looking into the Exchange's general method of operations, and not the conduct of any particular individuals.

Edward T. McCormick, President of the Exchange, and Joseph F. Reilly, Chairman, were advised of the investigation at a half-hour meeting with the commissioners this morning.—UPI.

Eichmann trial

ISRAEL PARLIAMENT WON'T INTERVENE IN IMMUNITY ORDER

Jerusalem, May 15.
The Israeli Knesset (Parliament) today decided by 41 votes to 29 not to intervene in the Attorney-General's decision to grant immunity to two former S.S. Officers if they come to testify in the Eichmann trial.

Mr. Pinhas Rosen, the Justice Minister, frequently heckled by Opposition Members, said "It is important that justice appears to be done, not only to us in Israel, but also to the world at large."

He said a fair trial included the right of the accused to defend himself.

RULE ADOPTED

The Attorney-General, Mr. Gideon Hausner, had adopted the rule that immunity "would be denied only to people against whom there was evidence they had committed crimes against the Jewish people or against humanity."

Others, even if liable to trial under other paragraphs in the 1950 law for the punishment of Nazis—such as membership in "criminal organisations"—would be granted immunity.

3 MINISTERS ARRESTED BY PRO-LUMUMBA GOVERNMENT

Leopoldville, May 15.
Seven prominent persons, including three ministers, have just been arrested in Stanleyville on the orders of the pro-Lumumba government of Antoine Gizenga, well informed circles said here today.

The ministers were Andre Mandi, Foreign Minister; Etienne Gizegas, "Central" Government, Charles Badjoko, Minister of Agriculture in the Government of Eastern Province, and Etienne Guestin, Minister of Health also in the Provincial Government.

They were arrested on Friday night. The Minister of Information in Stanleyville has confirmed these arrests, stating that they arose from internal "family quarrels."

Military leaders were also reported to be among those arrested. The leaders arrested were all believed to be moderate in their opinions.

Mandi, who was Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the government of Patrice Lumumba, took part in the recent Casablanca conference and went on to make a long journey to North Africa, France, Greece and Bulgaria.

MODERATES

In a recent speech, Mandi appealed to the Western powers as "champions of democracy" to recognize "the legality of the Stanleyville government."

The other two arrested ministers were also known as moderate politicians who have done their best to maintain order in the Oriental province and to discourage xenophobia.

The arrests of these ministers, and the reported arrests of soldiers who favour a reconciliation between the General Army and the Government, are interpreted here as a sign that Gizenga government is adopting a stiffer policy.

It is now strongly doubted here that the former Vice-Premier will accept Joseph Kasavubu's invitation to join the ranks of Congolese Parliamentarians.—AFP.

'TIRED AND FED UP'—SO HE CLUBBED MOTHER TO DEATH WITH AXE HANDLE

Glendale, Calif., May 15.
A 14-year-old boy walked into police headquarters on Monday and said he had beaten to death his mother, a prominent clubwoman in this Los Angeles suburb, with an axe handle.

Officers found the body of Mrs. Beulah Wolff, author of several volumes of poetry, in her home in a well-to-do neighborhood.

Detectives quoted the boy, Ronald, as saying he was "tired and fed up."

Mrs. Wolff, 40-year-old divorcee, was founder of the Glendale Writers Workshop and President of the San Fernando Valley branch of the National League of American Penwomen. She also headed a group known as the Successful Living Club.

BREAKFAST

Captain of Detectives W. H. Heyl said the boy told him his mother was fixing breakfast about 8:30 am on Monday when he walked up behind her and clubbed her on the head with a two-foot axe handle.

The boy said that she didn't fall so he started choking her, struggling with her in the kitchen and through a hallway into the living room. Heyl said the boy told him he continued to choke her until she died.

Then the youth said he knelt down and prayed. He said he and his mother had been arguing, presumably over some of his teenage problems.

Police said he appeared at the station at 9:15 am, slammed some house keys down on the sergeant's desk and said: "I've got something to report. I just killed my mother with an axe...an axe handle."

Officers said at the time he was quivering with nervousness and had blood splattered on his clothing.

Officers said Ronald figured in the news last April 23. Police were called at 5 am on that day to a house where they found the boy stuck in a chimney.

They had to dismantle it to get him out.

At the time he said he admired a girl in his class, and climbed down her chimney with a camera and a rag soaked in chloroform, planning to put her asleep and then take a picture.

After getting stuck, he remained in the chimney for about four hours before calling for help.—AP.

PAP suffers first defeat since 1959

Singapore, (By Airmail).
The ruling leftwing People's Action Party of Singapore has suffered its first defeat since it swept into power to rule this island state in 1959—a defeat that is likely to have far-reaching repercussions for Singapore.

The whole weight of the PAP political machine, led by the Prime Minister, Mr. Lee Kuan Yew, was not enough to dislodge Mr. Ong Eng Guan, former PAP Mayor of Singapore, ex-Minister for National Development—he was kicked out of his cabinet post by Mr. Lee and later expelled from the PAP—from his stronghold in Hong Lim, which he won again with a big majority over the PAP candidate in a by-election. After the PAP had expelled him from the party, he sat in the Legislative Assembly with two other expelled PAP members as an independent.

Then the PAP Government sought to get the assembly to pass a motion of condemnation against Mr. Ong for alleged conduct "unbecoming of an assembly member," and "abuse of the privilege of the Assembly." Before the assembly could make a move on this motion, Mr. Ong resigned from his seat after heated words were exchanged with Mr. Lee Kuan Yew and his cabinet during an assembly debate.

INQUIRY GROUP
The Government then set up a commission of inquiry which found that Mr. Ong's allegations of nepotism against the Prime Minister and Minister for Labour and Law in the Legislative Assembly were "groundless and reckless."

The PAP dominated assembly then proceeded to pass a resolution condemning Mr. Ong for his conduct. Only the PAP members of the house voted for the resolution.

All this political manoeuvring and mud-slinging—the PAP changed Mr. Ong with multiple charges of "misconduct," alleging that his marriage to his present wife in Hong Kong was bigamous—does not seem to have done Mr. Ong any harm politically. In fact, he has made him the underdog of Singapore politics.

As the by-election campaign got underway in the worker's district of Hong Lim, it became increasingly evident to everyone including the PAP by attendance at the rallies that the majority of the Hong Lim people were for Mr. Ong and not going to vote for the PAP candidate, Mr. Jock Yuen-thong, ex-newspaperman, ex-political detainee, political secretary to the Prime Minister and present treasurer of the PAP.

WHOLE CABINET
The PAP brought in their whole cabinet and the powerful Trades Union Congress (TUC) to speak to the people of Hong Lim. Meanwhile, Mr. Lee started holding luncheon rallies in the centre of the city to get to the white-collar class, the very few of whom live in Hong Lim. This was seen by political observers as an attempt by the PAP to win over the support of the white-collar and English-speaking workers who they had alienated during the 1959 general elections, for things to come including another by-election in Singapore soon.

Throughout the campaign, Mr. Jock and his party supporters, the stoutest of whom has been the Prime Minister, have stressed the need for realising the problems that faced the state—massive unemployment, resulting from a fantastically high birth rate, the need for industrialisation, for economic and political stability, for a Malayan consciousness and for the eventual goal of a merger with the Federation.

The PAP concept of independence for Singapore through a merger with the Federation was repeated again and again.

'A STOOGES'
The PAP maintained throughout the campaign that Mr. Ong was a stooge of the "opportunistic right" and the unwitting hand-maiden of the "lunatic left." He was called a liar repeatedly and the electorate was reminded that the commission of inquiry had branded him as a person not to be believed.

Mr. Ong campaigned on his famous 10 resolutions for which he was expelled from the PAP. The main item of the resolutions, which mainly called for the party to be reorganised, was one calling on the PAP Government to approach Britain, now independent, for aid and not wait until 1963 to review the present constitution, which only gives Singapore internal self-government.

Bang! bang! bang! went the guns in this hillbilly town

THE sleepy little hillbilly town of Sneedville, Tennessee, exploded in violence one night. And when the shooting was over, three law men were dead and Sheriff Verlin Maxey was seriously wounded.

Four men were thrown into jail by State police who raced in from neighbouring areas with sub-machine guns. The man blamed for starting the trouble, 35-year-old Constable C. B. Oakes, is one of the dead. A complaint that he was drunk had gone to Sheriff Maxey and Deputy Sheriff Elwood Hurd. After a chase Oakes leaped from his car, climbed a fence with wooden stakes pulled from the garden of his father's house, and, helped by friends or relatives, say the police, began beating the sheriff over the head. Deputy Hurd threw some tear-gas grenades and then shooting began.

As the store owner explained later, "I looked up and there was this nut with a paper bag over his head. I looked at my wife and we both started to laugh."

"You think this is big joke?" said Paper Bag. "Yes," said the shopkeeper, giggling. "Veal, I guess I do look kinda ridiculous," came the reply. And shaking his head sadly, the gunman left.

FIREMEN in New Hope, Pennsylvania, are selling tickets for a fund-raising dance with this slogan: "You come to our dance and we'll come to your fire."

Up drove two more deputy sheriffs, Alex Morris and Leon Tyler. Said Hurd later: "There was so much shooting going on that I ran back to the car to radio for help."

Bullet
"While I was bending over the radio Tyler opened the car door. He was hit by a bullet as he was getting in."

Tyler died at the side of the car, and so did his companion, Deputy Morris. Constable Oakes was shot dead while he was beating Sheriff Maxey, now in hospital with a bullet wound. Said Maxey's brother Elmer: "This is usually a quiet little place. This is the worst thing that's ever happened here."

VOTERS of a small Deep South town have decided to abolish their schools rather than obey a Government order to integrate them.

The voting was 1,155 to close the four white high schools, with only 56 votes against. Said schools superintendent Jack Meadows: "After the people's strong stand, if the courts try to force integration, there will be a complete boycott which would mean the destruction of public education for the white people."

LUCILLE BALL collapsed on stage in the middle of her Broadway musical "Wildcat". The curtain was lowered and 50-year-old Lucille was carried to her dressing room. She told a doctor: "I just couldn't catch my breath."

A chorus girl stepped into Lucille's part, but the star was well enough to share the final curtain call. The doctor prescribed a long rest—but she promised to be back.

AMERICA'S massive unemployment—now totals 5,500,000—may go as high as 8,500,000 by this time next year, the United States Labour Secretary, Mr. Arthur Goldberg, has said.

The increase will come from 1,800,000 newcomers on the labour market, and from another 1,800,000 who will lose their jobs because of automation.

Unless additional jobs are created to cope with them, Mr. Goldberg added, most of these extra 3,600,000 job-seekers will end up on the streets. Another 2,000,000 workers who want full-time jobs are at SENIOR PICASSO is reported to have said that an artist should never be asked to explain his pictures. It is even more painful when the critics explain them.

It is the glory of abstract art that an artist can choose from all the contradictory interpretations of his work that one which suits him best. Thus, if a picture has been variously interpreted as a dismantled bicycle, a pattern of fish-scales and the interior of a gasworks by moonlight, the artist can choose or he can outwit them all by saying, "No. It is a view of Vincennes as it appears in the subconscious mind of one who has never been there."

THE craze for unusual and even dangerous pets is raising certain problems. I hear of the proprietor of a small tobacco shop in Salford whose daughter was given an elephant by an Indian student who admired her. "Isn't he a pet?" said the girl.

"Yes, but where are we to put it?" asked her mother. "Your father won't want it in the shop or about the house. Besides, nice girls don't accept elephants from strangers." Pouting prettily, the girl hitched the great beast to the shop door and retired to her room in unreasonably high dudgeon. She has now swooped it for a full-grown panther, thrown out by the parents of a girl she knew.

Something really new
AMONG the secrets of the Strabismus Lunatic is a small atomic sailing ship. On nearing the moon the ship will be ejected from the nozzle of the rocket. Its sails, filled with atomic power, should enable the ship, even in a dead calm, to navigate one of the lunar canals, as though to the manner born. —(London Express Service).

U.S. SENATORS MAKE PROPOSAL

Gold Medal for Bob Hope?

Washington, May 15. A resolution proposing the award of a Gold Medal to British-born comedian Bob Hope was submitted to the Senate this afternoon. The resolution, prepared by Senator Stuart Symington, on behalf of 97 Senators spoke of Hope's "countless miles of travel around the globe" to entertain American troops during World War Two and the Korean War, and his "firm and imaginative support to humanitarian causes of every description" at home.

Hope, 58 in a fortnight's time, was born at Eltham, Kent, the fifth of six sons of a stonemason. His father took the family to America when Bob — then Leslie Townes Hope — was four years old. —Reuter.

Britain may ease ties with Kuwait

London, May 15. Britain was today reported considering a slackening of its treaty ties with Kuwait—the Persian Gulf sheikhdom which provides one third of British oil—to permit foreign diplomats to go there for the first time in 63 years.

Big thrill for dancers

London, May 15. Aspiring young dancers of the Royal Ballet School including five from Commonwealth countries, tasted the thrill of success at the school's annual public performance held at the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden.

About 40 students, aged from 14 to 20, appeared in two gay one-act ballets well suited to spirited youth. John Cranko's "Pineapple Poll" and Frederick Ashton's "Les Patineurs" — which allowed budding ballerinas and premier danseurs to seize their chances.

NEW DEPARTURE
A new departure in the performance—and an innovation on the Covent Garden stage—was a straightforward gymnastic display given by ten well-drilled boys from the school between the two ballets.

Dame Ninette Devalois, Director of the Royal Ballet, said gymnastics had a great affinity with ballet and helped to give dancers a sense of timing.—China Mail Special.

Danny Kaye in Japan

Tokyo, May 15. Hollywood comedian-actor Danny Kaye flew here today for a six-day visit to Japan to promote activities of the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund (Unicef).

The visit was his second since 1954 when he toured Japan and South East Asia as a former US President Eisenhower's Unicef "Goodwill Ambassador."

He was welcomed at Haneda Airport by Unicef officials and many Japanese fans carrying placards which read "Welcome Kaye"—AP.

Hindi service of BBC

London, May 15. The Hindi service of the BBC will broadcast a special 21st birthday programme.

Like many of its foreign language services, the BBC's special programmes for India were born during the last war.—China Mail Special.

Reports from Cairo last week said Britain had agreed to grant Kuwait "independence" after secret negotiations.

A For tea Office spokesman said Kuwait is already an independent state, protected, by Britain under the treaty of 1899.

The spokesman declined to say whether negotiations had been taking place but added:

ASKED PROTECTION

"The relationship is developing in the changing circumstances of the area and we can expect it to continue to do so."

Kuwait applied for British protection at the end of the last century when it seemed in danger of being swallowed up by the Turkish Empire.

The sheikhdom is responsible for its own foreign affairs but, since it lacks a fully fledged diplomatic service, these are largely handled by British missions abroad.

One aspect of the 1899 treaty was to exclude all foreign diplomatic representatives from Kuwait except for the British. Informants said this is the major part of the treaty likely to come under review.

UAR CONSUL
Agreement was recently reached in principle for Kuwait to receive a consul from the United Arab Republic, the sources said.

Treaty changes now in the air are likely to implement this along with the stationing of other foreign representatives in Kuwait.

Sources noted that Britain has also already agreed to train personnel from Kuwait in the techniques of diplomatic work.

The Cairo reports, published in the newspaper Al-Ahram, said Kuwait planned to join the Arab League and the United Nations.

Officials here noted that Kuwait is already a member of several UN agencies and said Britain would support any application it made for full UN membership.—AP.

Sir Ronald sees satellite messages within 10 years

Blackpool, May 15. Sir Ronald German, Director-General of the British Post Office, said here today that a system of satellite communications beaming up to 600 messages simultaneously could be operating within ten years.

This compared with about 100 at present transmitted by submarine cable.

He told the annual conference of the Post Office Workers' Trade Union that in an experimental Anglo-American communications satellite project to be launched next year, the Post Office's contribution would be the construction of a £2,500,000 ground station on a hill-top in Cornwall, the extreme west of England.

'NO DOUBT'
This he said would be "a miniature Jodrell Bank." (Jodrell Bank, in Cheshire, is a giant radio telescope which has tracked and picked up signals from American and Soviet satellites).

He said there was no doubt about the possibility of commercial communications by satellite within the next ten years, but "what we do not know enough about is the economic liability."—China Mail Special.

Well done, said the CO

Singapore, May 15. Eleven officers and NCO's of the Queen's Own Highlanders drove in triumph in four landrovers with an escort of pipers and drummers onto their Singapore parade ground today, having travelled overland from England.

"Well done, the lot of you," said their Commanding Officer, Lt. Col. Neil Baird, who was waiting on the parade ground to receive them.

The party left England on March 5 and travelled by land all the way except for the Calcutta-Penang sea voyage.

They were refused permission to drive through Burma.

The four vehicles were under the "command" of Capt. D. F. MacLachlan (of the Old High Mass, Inverness) as far as Delhi where he left them and flew to Singapore. He met them again yesterday in Penang when they landed, and drove down with them.

From Delhi to Singapore they were in the charge of Malaysian born Lt. J. P. Cameron (of 14 Hill View-road, Corstorphine, Edinburgh).—China Mail Special.

Teachers end strike

Glasgow, May 15. More than 5,000 Glasgow teachers went back to work today after an official one-week strike over pay and recruitment.

It was the biggest strike ever staged by British teachers. Although about 2,000 teachers stayed at work, 130,000 Glasgow children were without teachers.—China Mail Special.

From clerk to queen— how Toni the Tomboy grew up

...FROM POET FRANCIS THOMPSON'S "ARAB LOVE SONG"

THERE was a time when she was a diminutive, perky infant dressed in white ballet costume entering school dancing contests in Surrey.

There was a time when she ran through a garden in Suffolk, skipping rope in hand with a pet name for almost every flower.

And there was an awkward time, when she was growing up, when she would appear, a gawky 12-year-old, at the bars of her father's hotel in Kent.

And there was a time, just a few months ago, when she walked up the six steps to the Philadelphia Hotel in Amman, the dusty, noisy capital of Jordan.

Refined

This girl, Toni Gardiner, is an English colonel's daughter who is unbelievably similar to the colonel's daughters who were heroines in Victorian novels.

An attractive, amiable girl, slow and refined in speech, with a complexion cultured by the country air of England.

And she is to become the Queen of Jordan.

The other night as thousands of Arabs milled in celebration around the arid streets of Amman, and as the king made arrangements for the ornate Moslem wedding ceremony, people in England were remembering Toni and her childhood.

Her home is a small house, three bedrooms up and three rooms down in an

Her future home. King Hussein's palace.

English-sounding village called Chelmsford, near Ipswich.

Her aunt, Mrs. Kitty Goodchild, who lives in the house with her husband William, talked about Toni. Mrs. Goodchild's son, Barry, is Toni's godchild.

Mrs. Goodchild said: "Toni was born a war baby and her mother was living with us in Chelmsford when the baby was born. The air-raid siren had just sounded as she was born."

"She is a very lovable girl—typically English. An outdoor type, blessed with the disposition which makes everyone love her."

"Toni went to Malaya as a schoolgirl and when she came back here with her parents I had the shock of my life. She came back a beautiful young woman."

Toni has written to her uncle and aunt several times recently.

"Her letters have been very happy," said her aunt. "We have known of the romance with King Hussein for some little time but we have been under a sort of secrecy."

"Toni told us that she was engaged for on ordinary, quiet wedding," said Mrs. Goodchild. "But I'm afraid there is little hope of that now."

For only a brief period in her 20 years did Toni know civilian life. That was when her father left the Army and kept the Red Lion Hotel in the village of Bridge, Kent, on the road between Dover and Canterbury.

She went to St. Anne's Convent School at Sturry, near Canterbury.

Her home is a small house, three bedrooms up and three rooms down in an

Her old teacher, Sister Marie Daly, said: "I remember Toni very well. She was always very interested in dancing and learned ballet when she was with us."

Dances

A villager said: "She often used to come into the four-ale bar after her ballet practice and show us a new step."

Her father left the pub and rejoined the Army. And Toni started to travel again.

When her parents returned from Malaya, Colonel Gardiner was stationed at Upper Quinton, in Gloucestershire. Toni learned to type and took a job with an engineering firm in Stratford-on-Avon.

She got £5 a week as a wages clerk.

She was later transferred to the telephone switchboard.

"She was a delightful, charming girl," said her employer.

He also said that he had jokingly advised Toni to look for a rich oil sheik when she got to the Middle East with her parents.

Her former colleagues at the factory, the Peak Engineering Company, Ltd., were delighted by the news of her engagement.

"Particularly delighted was her former boy friend—27-year-old engineer Sidney Otley, now a married man with a baby daughter. He said: 'Yes I dated Toni several times after she had been at the factory about a month.'

"We had steady dates and as far as I know I was the only boy friend at the time."

"There was never anything serious between us. Never any talk of marriage or anything like that. She was a very quiet girl."

Toni then went to work as a typist on the scripts of the film "Lawrence of Arabia" in Amman.

She and the rest of the company were invited to a reception in the royal palace where she had her first meeting with the handsome young king.

New job

Then she left the film company to work as a £15-a-week office telephone switchboard operator in Amman. Her colleagues called her "Toni the tomboy."

FOOTNOTE: In Toni's birth certificate her Christian names are given simply as "Toni Avril."

In the royal announcement from Amman her names were given as "Antoinette Avril."

SHE WAS SO VERY MUCH IN LOVE

TONI GARDINER visited London a month ago to shop for her trousseau. She stayed at a West End hotel. The Jordanian Ambassador and a friend of Toni's at the Embassy were the only people who knew of the wedding plans apart from her family. The friend was sworn to secrecy.

The other night she said: "Toni seemed to be walking on air. But all the time I marvelled at the way she was able to keep the secret of her romance."

"As the days went on, Toni got tired of the fittings and the selection of her trousseau."

Like so many whose home is in England but who have spent much time abroad, she loved to be here but wanted to get back. And in her case there was every reason for impatience. She was so obviously in love."

Toni went to Ronald Paterson, a leading London couturier, for her wedding dress.

She went to his Albemarle-street salon for the fittings. "She was so sweet, really charming," said Paterson's Canadian-born wife the other day. "Until we opened our paper one morning we had no idea whom she was marrying."

"She did, however, tell us where the wedding was to be, and we felt she was so young to be going so far away."

Toni, with her parents in the garden of their Amman home.

AND WHAT
OF HER
FUTURE?
LADY LUCK
says:—

BIRTHDAY: April 25.
AGE: 20.

VENUS is in its own sign of Taurus in the horoscope of Toni Gardiner, and this is always an asset to any woman because it gives her natural, unsophisticated charm, greatly enhancing her femininity.

It also means that she has good judgment and an instinct for doing the right thing.

The sun is in conjunction with Venus, and as this gives an openness of heart there is little doubt that she will be accepted among the people of Jordan.

She will take quite easily to the customs and splendours that will surround her royal life.

When occasion demands, she has the presence to speak up for herself.

A school picture. Toni was always keen on dancing.

Just Fancy That!

A CLUB-TIED Cricket Type walked across the cocktail lounge at London Airport recently and asked a man listening to a portable radio commentary on the delayed American rocket launching: "What's the score?" "It's postponed," came the reply. "What, rain?" "No, cloud." Puzzled retirement of Club Tie.

'I WISH TO DEDICATE MYSELF TO THE SERVICE OF JORDAN'

TONI is small and fair and soft as a rose in a brown desert of a country. But she is tough enough to share the world's toughest throne.

Recently, this 20-year-old girl, who was educated in an English convent and is now a Moslem, has been living out in the wilds with a Bedouin tribe.

She has been picking up the local dialect and learning about the hard-riding tribesmen by whose fierce fighting King Hussein's family came to the throne, and on whose fierce loyalty Hussein's life depends.

DELIGHTED

When the 25-year-old King, hoping for a son and heir (he has a daughter, Princess Aliya, aged five, by his previous marriage) announced that he is to marry Toni, he said: "I was in loneliness and desolation, companion of misery and pain. Now I am happy for the first time in my life." His man cried: "Give us a boy child, your Majesty."

At her parents' home in Amman, Toni said: "I am very, very happy." Her father, Col. Gardiner, said: "I cannot tell you how delighted we are."

Toni, now Her Highness Mona al Hussein ("Hussein's Wish") and soon to be Queen, added: "I wish to dedicate myself to the service of Jordan."

FRESH ideas for maternity wear are very few and far between and styles could scarcely be described as keeping up with the times.

However now and then fashion comes along with a few unexpected bonuses for the expectant mother, in the way of the Trapeze, line, the Empire line and now the low waisted look and the loose overblouse—all of which are ideal for the early months.

They will not of course do for the later weeks when, like it or not, we all have to go into full fledged maternity clothes.

Problem

If you are expecting a baby sometime this summer, just what to wear over the last few months can be rather a tricky problem.

What is suitable, fashionable and IN for mothers-to-be in other parts of the world may be highly unsuitable and altogether uncomfortable in the Colony's hot humid weather.

The return of dresses has been one of the surprises of the maternity world and a loose cotton dress is probably the coolest and most comfortable garment one can wear in the heat here. But not everyone looks their best in flowing robes and far from looking smart the effect is often one of a battleship in full sail.

Expensive

Looking round the few local shops the other day that stock maternity wear, I was impressed only by the vast expense and over-all dearth of the small selection they had to offer.

Dresses and sad looking navy and chocolate skirts in enormous sizes were the only things within a reasonable price range.

If you want to pay anything up to $300 for a brocade or satin affair for evening wear, you should be able to find something at Paquerette's in Des Voeux-road. The only other shop with anything to offer is Mode Elite (Queen's-road) who have one or two outfits for beach wear.

These include a very attractive maternity bathing suit (which will take you into the sea and out again very neatly) in black jersey-knit with a white pique V-shaped

HELEN BURKE REPORTS ON THE TORQUAY FOOD FESTIVAL IN BRITAIN

Fancy a chef forgetting the flavour!

London.

OF what use are gastronomic exhibitions? I have just attended the International Gastronomic Festival at Torquay. Every year, somewhere in this country or abroad, these exhibitions are held. They show the public how versatile, how artistic—and, sometimes, how misguided—those who exhibit can be.

The main purpose could be to encourage young chefs to greater efforts in their craft. What about the judges? What do they look for? The judge at this festival was my old friend, Bartolomeo Calderoni, maître chef des cuisines of the May Fair. I asked him what he felt about this particular Festival.

"There were some very interesting displays of quite a good standard according to appearance and novelty," he said. "What was neglected, however, was the fundamental principle of the culinary art—flavour."

No seasoning

"When a dish has to be judged, flavour is the first consideration. The exhibits are not there only to be looked at, that could be."

"The taste of the majority of them was awful — no seasoning. The very worst thing that could be."

What about the gold, silver and bronze medalists? "Well, their exhibits were the best of their kind. The best of all was a lobster, a new creation of a young man named Connor, 25 years of age, the larder chef of the Imperial Hotel, Torquay, very simple, not at all elaborated, neat and clean in appearance, with an excellent flavour."

Mr Connor received the highest award — the Grand Prize of the Festival.

What makes me sad about these culinary exhibitions is the simple fact that, when the judge has given his awards, his work is finished. It seems to me that all the exhibitors, especially the younger ones, should be told — not individuals but in general — what is good and (particularly) bad about their work.

TRY THIS

HERE'S a recipe for Navarin Printanier based on that of the great Escoffier, which should serve 4 to 5 persons.

Cut 1½ to 2lb fat-free shoulder of lamb into pieces of 2½ to 3oz. each. Fry them in a little of the lamb fat until golden brown all over, adding salt to taste and a good pinch of sugar, which will caramelize and assist the browning in the pan.

Drain off the fat. Work a tablespoon of flour into the pan. Cook for a minute, cool a little, then stir in a tablespoon of tomato purée, 1½ pints water and some freshly milled pepper. Cover and cook gently for an hour.

Now lift the pieces of lamb into a stewpot or casserole. Add 12 whole small onions, 1lb. small new carrots, two to three quartered peeled small white turnips and 12 small new potatoes. Strain the sauce over them. Cover again and cook for another ½ hour.

Finally, add a small cupful each of shelled new peas and French beans, cut into ½ in. diamonds, and cook, covered, for a further ½ hour.—London Express Service.

Rupert and Gwyneth—15

While Gwyneth watches the speck in the sky Rupert rapidly tells her how he and Podge found the cave. Then she sits down moodily. "An old witch used to live here," she explains slowly, "but she retired last year and I thought it might be fun to try into in front edged with big white daisies. This is expensive at $125, but worth it I think.

Another beach ensemble which will not go into the sea but will still protect you on the sands is again in the form of a black jersey swimsuit with, this time, a gay cotton poncho top in bright colours to be worn over the top. This will cost you $105.

I also liked a set of a top with aquamarine polka dots on white worn over matching aquamarine shorts.

No cottons

Nowhere could I find any pretty dresses or two pieces to be worn everyday—so my advice to any expectant mums is to look out on something gay for the beach, an item very difficult to make yourself or have copied satisfactorily, and have the rest of the clothes you will need made up by your local tailor.

I will have pictures of maternity styles in his fashion magazines—otherwise have a look through the big pattern books for ideas.

You will not want to waste money on clothes which most women are thankful to be rid of once the baby has arrived. However you will want enough clothes to see you through every occasion.

Having had two babies here during the summer I have found the following list makes up a fairly comprehensive basic wardrobe. The colours I have mentioned are only as a guide to show you how the separates will co-ordinate with each other.

For daytime: 1 light navy linen shirt (lined with silk to avoid wearing a slip underneath). 1 small patterned navy and white loose top.

1 brilliantly coloured turquoise, navy and white flowered top.

1 pair of turquoise treads to wear at home.

For more dressy daytime and informal evening wear: 1 rather smarter matching two piece or dress which can be altered to suit the occasion with accessories.

For the beach: Either a maternity bathing suit and loose towelling jacket or a shorts and top set.

General do's and don'ts

DON'T stick to the darkest, stodgiest colours as one shop assistant once advised me — "After all, you don't want to emphasise it do you modern?" she breathed confidentially over the counter.

DON'T paddle round the town in flip flops—they're all right for the beach, but there are plenty of very pretty sandals with low heels or open-work pumps to be found in the shops. You may need to buy shoes a half-size larger during the hot weather.

DON'T slouch about—nothing looks worse than the maternity waddle so often seen.

DON'T bore everybody with gassy and continual details about your blood pressure and swollen feet — nobody wants to know except your doctor.

DON'T go into a grand decline just because you're having a baby — people have had them before you know.

DO on the other hand, make an effort to look pretty and nice. DO look after your hair and skin — both are often at their best during this time.

DO see that whatever you choose to wear is crisp and freshly ironed, and that all shoulder straps are out of sight.

DO avoid the unnecessary frills and bows, plaits and gathers that so often decorate the expectant mother, labelling her pregnant in capital letters.

DO choose uncluttered lines and clear bright colours but avoid hectic scarlets, shocking pinks and vivid yellows and oranges. You may not worry about emphasising it but you don't want to look like a Delisha beacon either.

DO remember that the Empire line flaring from below the bustline is only for tall people and that one-piece dresses give a greater illusion of height, while two-piece outfits tend to cut the figure — although personally I think they are much smarter.

A word on lingerie to end with. A loose cotton housecoat is a useful item to have and there are some lovely ones to choose from in the shops at the moment.

Mode Elite also have some special underwear for mothers-to-be including pants, bras, half-slips and light girdles—all very reasonably priced. A luxury you may say—but very good for the morale to know that you are looking nice underneath as well as on the surface.

Punch's balloon trip

—He Tells Hanid How He Once Bumped Into Moon—

By MAX TRELL

"MR PUNCH," said Hanid, the Shadow Girl with the Turned-About Name, to her old friend, "did you ever go in a balloon?"

Mr Punch at this moment — in fact, every day at this moment — happened to be eating his breakfast. He smiled as he stuffed a piece of toast in his mouth.

"Certainly," he said. "You did," exclaimed Hanid. "My dear Girl," said Mr Punch as he carefully buttered a fresh piece of toast, then spread a thick layer of marmalade over the butter. "I used to go up in a balloon almost every day. I've taken hundreds of balloon trips."

Hanid's eyes narrowed a little. She moved up closer to Mr Punch and gave him a sharp look.

"Mr Punch," she said, "are you sure you're not making up a story?"

Alfardy cotton

"My darling," said Mr Punch, "I always tell the truth." Then he smiled and winked. "Now what was this you wanted to know about my ballooning? But first," he added, "why don't you sit down and have some toast?"

Hanid replied that she had already eaten her breakfast. "If you went on so many balloon trips," she said to Mr idea at the time — no climbing, no going through gates, just floating up and floating down again.

"So I blew up my balloon and up in the air it went." Hanid wanted to know how Mr Punch blew up his balloon, and where he kept it.

"I just blew it up by blowing," replied Mr Punch. "And, when I wasn't using my balloon for going on trips, I kept it in my pocket."

Blow it up

"Anyway, I blew it up until it was about as big as a Horse, then I carefully fastened the end of it to a rocking chair. I sat down in the chair, gave a push with my foot and up we went, straight up into the air."

"Higher than the fence?" asked Hanid, still sounding as if she didn't believe any of this.

"Oh, much higher," said Mr Punch. "I guess I must have blown my balloon up bigger than I thought, because, all of a sudden, I noticed that I was bumping against something hard."

Doesn't believe it

"Something hard?" asked Hanid, puzzled. "What was it?" "The moon," said Mr Punch. "No!" shouted Hanid. "You couldn't have gone up that high!"

"Darling," said Mr Punch, "is there anything else in the whole sky that's big and round and has a face? Is there anything else like that except the moon?"

Hanid had to agree that it must have been the moon. "Luckily," Mr Punch went on, "it was a sunny morning, so the moon didn't stay up in the sky very long. I held on to it while it came down."

"And, finally, there I was, right in my Grandmother's garden."

Grandmother greeted him "Good morning, Punch," my Grandmother said to me with her beautiful smile when I walked into her kitchen. "You're a little late this morning. I was about to look over the fence and see where you were."

"But, of course," said Mr Punch to Hanid, "I didn't tell my Grandmother about my balloon trip. She wouldn't have believed me."

"And neither do I," said Hanid. But Mr Punch only chuckled and buttered himself another slice of toast.

THE bidding was the same at both tables in this team match, as was the early play. East was allowed to hold the first made trick. South won the second and knocked out West's ace of clubs. A third made lead took care of South's second stopper and South cashed the clubs, stopping in his own hand. East had to make two discards. At table one East let go two diamonds. Now South could have taken four diamond tricks, but unfortunately he wasn't looking at the enemy's cards and chose to take a diamond finesse. East made his queen of diamonds and two more spades for down one.

At the other table East was much more conservative. He let one diamond and one spade go.

Australians in sight of second win

SURREY SCORE 161 AND 207 FOR SEVEN AGAINST TOURISTS' 1st INNINGS 341

Peter May's good form a redeeming feature

London, May 15.

The Australians were in sight of the second victory of their tour of England at the close of play today at the Oval on the second day of their match against Surrey. Surrey, who followed on, were only 27 runs ahead at the close, with seven second innings wickets down.

Replying to the Australians' first innings 341 for seven, Surrey declared, they totalled only 161, then lost seven for 207 in their second innings.

England captain Peter May, Mike Willett and Ken Barrington were the only Surrey batsmen to put up any show against the Australian attack.

Retired

May made 58 in the first innings before being run out and was 28 not out in the second when he retired in order to avoid aggravating a slightly pulled groin muscle from which he has been suffering recently.

Willett, batting adventurous, hit 42 and 55, and Barrington, after a first innings failure, redeemed himself with a century of 43 in the afternoon.

Though Surrey seem headed for sure defeat, May's form was encouraging for England's prospects in the Tests. His command of stroke play showed that he is as good a batsman as ever, and he won mastery over both fast and slow bowlers.

May hit some glorious shots. He had nine fours in his first innings stay of 115 minutes, and added 96 for the fourth wicket with Willett in just over an hour and a half. Willett's 42 included nine boundaries, and he scored his second innings 55 in only 55 minutes, with the help of twelve fours.

Attractive batting
Barrington batted attractively in the afternoon and was beginning to find his hardest hitting from when he was run out.

Rebby Simpson, whose goosy was difficult to spot, took the last four wickets in the first innings for 13 runs in six overs.

but was hit for 61 without meeting with any success in the second innings. Alan Davidson, the fast left-arm bowler, was often uncertain in length and to date has only one wicket for 71 runs.

Apart from May's retirement, Dave Fletcher, with a broken finger, is unable to bat for Surrey. Australia's Norrish O'Neill had to leave the field today with a twisted ankle.

The Nawab of Pataudi continues brilliant form with career-best 144

London, May 15.

The Nawab of Pataudi, continuing his brilliant form for Oxford University, hit the highest score of his first-class career today at Oxford, scoring 144 off Middlesex.

The Indian batsman who is captain of the university side hit twenty fours and three sixes in an innings of under two hours.

The century took 149 minutes. Pataudi's 144 follows knocks of 70 not out, 100 and 103 not out. Today he shared in a stand of 207 with 19-year-old Duncan Worsley, a freshman who scored his maiden century.

But in contrast to his partner's quick-scoring form, Worsley's hundred took him 327 minutes. Pataudi's father was one of the few men to score four consecutive centuries. He did the feat in his third year at Oxford.

Pataudi could well surpass his father for he is only in his second year at Oxford. He has already equaled his famous father in one respect — he scored a century in his first Oxford-Cambridge match last year.

The young Indian is now well in the running to score one thousand runs before the end of May. He has already 508 runs to his credit.

While the sun shines on the 20-year-old Bhopal-born Nawab, gloom surrounds another Oxford Indian. Test cricketer Abbas Ali Balgi, contrasting violently with Pataudi, he has made nine, five and, today, a duck, in his last three outings.

Nevertheless, the Dark Blues are well on top of the Headquarters' team, having made 393 for five declared in reply to Middlesex's 204 and 32 for no wicket. —APF.

THREE-OLYMPIAN WEDDING GROUP

Olympic sprinter and long-jumper Mary Signal, the "golden girl" of British sport, was married at the Holborn Registry last week to Olympic sculler Sidney Rand. Mary (21) and Sidney (26) met for the first time last month, when Gordon Pirie introduced them on Good Friday, and yesterday Pirie was best man at the wedding.

It was a quiet wedding. Sidney explained: "We have both had so many romances in the past we thought it would be better not to have any fuss." Mary, who flew back to London from an athletics meeting in Tel Aviv, Israel, barely had time to get to her Knightsbridge hair salon before the wedding.

As they drove off on their honeymoon, Mary said to Sidney: "Remember, I've got to be back for Saturday. I'm hurrying at Chiswick." —London Express Photo.

SUPPORT FOR INCLUSION OF JUDO IN THE GAMES

Paris, May 15.

Japan's bid to get Judo included in the 1964 Olympic Games at Tokyo will have the full backing of the cult's French authorities.

M. Jean De Pimentel, President of the French Judo Association, told Reuter here today that his organization were fully in favour of Judo being included in the Olympic Games.

He pointed out that Judo was a popular sport practised by true amateurs and that already it staged World and European Championships.

"Judo's inclusion had already been discussed at last year's meeting of the International Olympic Committee in Rome during the Games there," said M. De Pimentel.

"As far as France is concerned, we shall back any proposal for the inclusion of Judo in the next Olympics."

M. De Pimentel said that France's delegate at the next IOC meeting in Athens from June 15 to 24 would be M. Paul Bonnet-Mary, Honorary President of the French Judo Association, who would be instructed to speak in favour of the cult's inclusion.

M. Pierre Morel, Secretary of the French Olympic Committee, pointed out that for a sport to be included in the Olympics, it had to be practised in at least 25 countries. In the case of Judo nearly 40 nations already had active Judoists, and the French Olympic authorities were fully in favour of its inclusion at Tokyo.

WORLD'S TOP HARD COURT TENNIS EVENT

Pietrangeli picked to keep singles title in French International Tournament

Paris, May 15.

Players from 28 countries were arriving here today for the world's premier hard court tennis tournament, the International Championships of France.

The gruelling 13-day event begins tomorrow at Stade Roland Garros, on the fringe of the Boulogne Woods in Auteuil, Western Paris.

In the absence of Wimbledon champion Neale Fraser, of Australia, Italian star Nicola Pietrangeli is a warm favourite to become the first player since the war to win the men's singles title for the third successive year.

Skill not enough
The slow brick-red surface of the Paris courts is among the most demanding in the world, and it will be even more lifeless than usual for the opening games after several hours of rain today.

Skill alone is not sufficient here. Toll, sweat and accurate ground-stroke control are prerequisites of victory. Exponents of the big serve and volley game have a poor record in the Championships.

Fraser, no doubt mindful of his experience here a year ago, when he retired with crippling cramp, prefers to play in Berlin this week. The Australian No. 1, troubled by his left knee since the end of last year, wants to keep as much in store as possible for the defence of his Wimbledon crown next month.

In 1959, Pietrangeli forced his way through a strong field when seeded third. Last year, the popular 27-year-old Italian retained the title, though seeded only sixth. This time he wears the mantle of No. 1 seed, and he richly deserves such recognition.

The seeding committee predict that Pietrangeli and Australian left-hander Rod Laver, who fought out the Italian final in Turin today, will repeat the performance here.

The seeds
Laver, beaten finalist in the Wimbledon United States, Australian and British Hard Court Championships, again lost today. So in Paris the slim Queenslander will be out to shake off the "champion runner-up" tag which has bedevilled him in past months.

If all the seeded men justify their status, the fourth round line-up will be (seeding numbers in brackets):
Rod Laver, Australia, (2), vs Roland Barnes, Brazil, (15); Ron Holmberg, USA, (7), vs Jackie Brichant, Belgium, (10); Roy Emerson, Australia, (3), vs Orlando Sirola, Italy, (14); Manuel Santana, Spain, (6), vs Ulf Schmidt, Sweden, (13); Bob Hewitt, Australia, (12), vs Pierre Darmon, France, (5); Mario Lamas, Mexico, (13), vs Jan-Erik Lundquist, Sweden, (4); Bob Mark, Australia, (9), vs Bobby Wilson, Britain, (8); Lew Gerrard, New Zealand, (16), vs Nicola Pietrangeli, Italy, (1).

Had the French officials been able to await the Turin results, the women's seedings here would have presented a rather different picture from the last drawn up last week.

They rated Australian Lesley Turner only 15th, but in Italy the 18-year-old Sydney girl, making her first trip to Europe, swept past several world-ranking stars to reach the final, in which she lost to Wimbledon champion Maria Bueno of Brazil.

Miss Bueno is seeded No. 2 here, behind defending American champion Darlene Hard, who was among Miss Lesley's victims.

Another Australian teenager likely to make her mark is national champion Margaret Smith, whose only reverse so far in Europe was against Miss Bueno in Italy. —Reuter.

British Army conducts soccer coaching courses

By ARCHIE QUICK

London, May 15.

The Army has just completed its biggest and most comprehensive drive to train and qualify soccer coaches. At the School of Physical Training at Aldershot twenty learners and eighteen advanced pupils have been on a three weeks' course conducted by Sid Cann, former manager of Southampton and now manager of Wycombe Wanderers.

Arthur Rowe, of Spurs and Crystal Palace fame, and ex-England captain Bill Wright have been visitors, while Gordon Jagg, the Charlton Athletic centre-half, and Keith Spurgeon, once with Spurs and Charlton, and also a Nigerian FA coach, have been assisting with the demonstrations.

Spurgeon, by the way, has just been appointed manager of Ajax FC (Amsterdam) in succession to the late Bertus van der Stoep. He will take up his duties on June 1.

When the final examinations are held on May 17 and 18 those for the preliminary certificate will be conducted by F.N.R. Creek, former Corinthian and now manager of the Football Association's amateur eleven, and Jack Goodwin, ex-Brentford, and those for the advanced certificate by George Smith, the new Portsmouth manager.

Famous visitor

Jimmy Hill or Ron Greenwood was to have examined the latter course, but one is due at the Ministry of Labour as Secretary of the Players' Union and the other has a West Ham United Board meeting.

A distinguished visitor was Mr. Walter Winterbottom, manager of the triumphant 49-England international team. He watched a "conditioned" match, which is a game in which every move is pre-arranged. In this case, it was one of altercate long and short passes.

The course itinerary, syllabus or curriculum—whatever you care to call it—covered every facet of football, and it is hoped to hold another course on similar lines at Loughborough College in the summer. It is also expected that the present course will be repeated annually.

On 'substitution'

The examinations come under four headings—knowledge of the Laws of the Game, the theory of coaching, personal ability as footballers to demonstrate and the ability to lead and to coach. In this case, the students were drawn from the United Kingdom and BAOR, but it is planned that in the future other overseas commands will be included. The 33 men under instruction also went to Wembley Stadium for the England versus Mexico international and each had to render a match analysis. After he had seen the "conditioned" game which was handled by an Army FA referee and the professional coaches, Mr. Winterbottom gave an hour's talk, illustrating his remarks with blackboard diagrams.

He covered his subject fully, detailing the skills and strategies, and answering questions. In reply to one of these he showed that he is very clearly against substitution in this country. "We play substitution for injury in this country against other national sides from overseas," he said, "but too often they play substitution for strategy."

"Because of the hoodoo on the Wembley Final it has been suggested that we should have substitutes, but where would it end? If we did that, why not in the South-Islands, and also the preliminary round?" Then why not in League matches and so on? Not long ago when we were playing an international overseas its opponents tried to bring on two 'subs' late in the second half. When I protested they said it was all part of their plan. Their 'subs' often start stripping from their track suit long before an injury."

Mr. Winterbottom's final comment was: "What an improvement National Service in the Army made to Gerry Hitchens, England's new centre-forward!"
